

St. Andrew's Biblical Theological Institute

St. Andrew's Institute is an established educational charity developing academic and publishing programs to promote high level theological education, interconfessional and interreligious dialogue in Russia. St. Andrew's combines the best of confessional and secular educational institutions. It is Orthodox in background and ecumenical in character. Its hallmark is an appeal to laity and openness to dialogue and free discussions.

One of the most successful and important educational projects of St. Andrew's is the Summer Theological Institute which is held annually in Moscow and other places and aims to upgrade the level of education of priests, pastors, students and teachers of theological seminaries and university departments as well as of other specialists. St. Andrew's organizes public lectures, regular conferences and seminars and many other academic activities.

St. Andrew's became a leader in academic theological publishing in Russian – it has published several hundred top-level books which are widely used by theological and secular educational institutions of all denominations in Russia, Ukraine, Belarus etc.. It publishes also an academic quarterly "Pages: Theology, Culture & Education". Many books have been approved as texts for students by the state and church authorities. St. Andrew's aims to present to Russian readers the best available Western scholarship from different Christian traditions. Among its translations are books by Karl Barth, Hans Urs von Balthasar, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Karl Rahner, Charles Taylor, René Girard, Raymond Brown, Hans Küng, John Zizioulas, Rowan Williams, Paul Evdokimov, Bruce Metzger, Joseph Ratzinger, Geoffrey Wainwright, Walter Kasper ...
